SHOW GIRL REPORTS SUICIDE THEN LEAPS FROM HOTEL WINDOW

Phonetic Intentions;
Diary Reveals Love
Motive

CHICAGO, June 6.—A torn diary and a seven-word declaration of love told the story today of the twelve-story death leap of Miss Barbara Cole, show girl who played in "Rose Marie" and Ziegfeld's "Blue Boy."

Miss Cole took the receiver from her phone last night in her luxurious northside apartment and called for the hotel office.

"This is Miss Cole. I am going to jump from my window," she announced calmly to the startled operator.

A minute later her body was found in State Street.

She had replaced the receiver, walked across the room, lifted the screen and dived out the window. The only note police could find was a single sentence written across the fly leaf of her diary. It read:

Edwin Page, La Salle Street broker, lives at that address and when communicated with said he and Miss Cole had had a love affair but it was broken off after a quarrel.

"She telephoned me," Page said, "and accused me of being distant and cold. She threatened to jump from the window but I thought it was idle talk. I hung up the receiver."

A half filled highball glass was found on the mantle. Miss Bessie Norden, an acquaintance, said Miss Cole had been married and was the mother of two children.

FOREST FIRES SPREAD HAVOC

Planes Rush Relief To Manitoba

WINNIPEG, Man., June 6.—Food and clothing were rushed by airplanes today to hundreds made homeless in northern Manitoba by widespread forest fires.

Government forestry service planes, augmented by a fleet of CO-119s, are in an effort to alleviate suffering among settlers and quell blazes that had wiped out Cranberry Portage and Mile 83, both small settlements.

So far no casualties have been reported but 1,000 residents of Cranberry Portage were forced to take to rafts in Lake Athapapuskow to escape the swift flames.

A rainless spring had made the forest and brush ready fuel. Gold seekers have turned for the time being from their hunt for wealth to aid rangers and settlers in backfiring large areas to confine the fires so they will burn out.

ARNOLD MOTION FOR TRIAL TO BE HEARD

WOOSTER, June 6.—Arguments for a new trial for Elias and Arthur Arnold, convicted in March for stealing four-year-old Melvin Horst from Orrville, will be heard tomorrow by Judges Pardee, Washburn and Funk of the court of appeals.

Elias Arnold, the father, is serving a sentence in the state penitentiary at Columbus and Arthur is in the reformatory at Mansfield.

The Horst boy disappeared on the evening of Dec. 27. He never has been found. The Arnolds were convicted chiefly on the testimony of Junior Hanna, a nephew of Elias, who said he saw the Horst boy enter to the Arnold home, and later carried away in an auto.

It was brought out at the trial that the Arnolds bore ill feeling toward Marshal Roy Horst of Orrville, an uncle of the missing boy.

AMERICAN GUNBOAT IN DISTRESS AFTER STRIKING ON ROCKS

Crew Transferred To Other Vessels At Shanghai

SHANGHAI, June 6.—The U. S. Luzon, flagship of the Yangtze patrol, was reported in danger of sinking today after striking rocks off the Woosung breakwater late last night.

The crew of the vessel was transferred at 1 a. m. today to the U. S. S. Ohio and the U. S. S. Helena. Two mine-sweepers were standing by the Luzon attempting to plug two holes which were punched in the forward bottom of the vessel when it struck the rocks.

One of two motorboats which were sent to aid the Luzon also went on the rocks and was damaged, advices received here said.

Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristle, who was aboard the U. S. S. Pittsburgh, sent advices here today minimizing the damage to the Luzon and saying that only a skeleton crew was aboard the vessel.

Rear Admiral Thomas T. Craven was aboard the Luzon when it struck.

The Luzon, a river gunboat, recently was built here at a cost of approximately $1,000,000.

PADLOCKED CAT MAY STARVE

Federal Agents Turn "Blind Tiger" Into "Starved Kitten"; Tom Martyr To Dry Laws

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 6.

—Tom, a Maltese cat, scratched at the plate glass window of a padlocked soft drink parlor today, facing slow death by starvation unless Uncle Sam's heart is moved by pity.

Tom was imprisoned thirteen days ago when federal marshals snapped a padlock on his home—otherwise the soft drink parlor of George Bailey.

Kind hearted citizens, noticing Tom in the empty store, called his plight to the attention of the humane society, which in turn appealed to the United States district attorney.

But man made laws proved too rigid to free an alley cat and the district attorney's office said it had no authority to open the building, even to release Tom.

Newspapers took up Tom's case and his pinched face peered from their pages today, in a mute appeal for a saucer of milk and chunk of liver.

But law is law, even for cats, so Tom continued to pace his prison, starvation lurking in his green eyes.

EMBARRASSING SITUATIONS MAY DELAY CONGRESSIONAL RECESS

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Congress may recess for the summer a week from Saturday if its leaders are able to extricate themselves from two embarrassing situations and carry out the plans to which they have agreed.

The embarrassing situations are divided between the two houses. House leaders are knee-deep in difficulties over two amendments which have been adopted to the innocent census and reapportionment bill, the amendments providing no alien or colored citizen not allowed to vote can be counted when seats for the new house are allotted.

Senate leaders are discussing plans to put down the threatened rebellion against the farm conference agreement eliminating the debtors' bill.

Optimists believe both situations will work themselves out without serious difficulties. They feel sure the original plan of adjourning until August or September to handle the tariff bill will finally be carried through.

The house well knows the senate will never accept either of its new amendments to the census bill. The senate defeated the alien exclusion plan in two votes, the last one by the narrow margin of 47 to 46 when opponents of the amendment did not have all their votes present.

The negro exclusion amendment which would deprive many southern states of seats they now hold in congress is considered so obnoxious by southern senators they would filibuster indefinitely against even receiving the measure.

Knowing this the house leaders are worried only about how to get rid of the amendments without a prolonged fight.

The problem of the senate leaders is less embarrassing but more complex. If advocates of the debtors' bill decide to filibuster they can keep congress in session indefinitely. The farm agreement which excludes the debtors' bill will be finished by the house and senate conferees and reported to the house late today. Under the rules it must lie over until tomorrow.

The plan is to take it up tomorrow and pass it without any extended debate. Then it will be sent to the senate for the fight.

While these matters bother the harassed leaders, the senate continued with its discussion of the national origins provision of the immigration act. A vote is expected late today or tomorrow. An arrangement already has been reached for a vote at 1 p. m. tomorrow on the Norris resolution to abolish short sessions of congress.

The house is continuing its efforts to straighten out the census amendments muddle.

ALLEGED SLAYER IS CONVICTED; TO DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Slayer Of Mother-In-Law Pleads Own Defense

PORTSMOUTH, O., June 6.—Joseph B. Locher, 50, who plead his own case before the jury with the declaration that "anybody in love is insane," must die in the electric chair for the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Galloway, 37.

A jury found Locher guilty after deliberating for four hours and a half. Mercy was not recommended, thus making the sentence of death mandatory. Sentence will be pronounced by Judge Russell K. McCurdy. The chief witness against Locher was his wife, Lucy, from whom he separated just before Mrs. Galloway was slain. The couple had lived with Mrs. Galloway before their estrangement and Locher blamed the woman for their troubles.

Locher's only ray of hope is a motion for a new trial which his attorney, George W. Sheppard, said would be filed. Sentence will be withheld pending the motion.

Mrs. Galloway was killed last February at her home in City View, near here. Locher had gone away after quarrelling with his seventeen-year-old wife, but returned "impelled by his love for Lucy," he said.

Locher said he remembered nothing after returning. His wife testified he shot her mother, then turned the gun on her. She is Locher's seventh wife, and she, too, had been married before.

Testimony brought out at the trial tended to show that Locher persuaded his wife to divorce her former husband, Marshall Hammond, so she could marry him. He found justification for this, he told the jury, in Biblical stories.

MAYOR IS PLAYING SLOT MACHINES

CHAGRIN FALLS, O., June 6.—Business was in prospect for slot machine operators today as Mayor Frank W. Stanton set out to patronize all of them.

Whether the business will be profitable depends on the returns received by the mayor, and his decision as to whether they are gambling devices.

The operators stand to win everything or nothing. If the mayor gets more than his money's worth, he will conclude the machines are gambling devices, and order them seized.

Mayor Stanton is acting on the advice of County Prosecutor Ray T. Miller, who told him the best way to determine whether the machines were gambling devices was to play them.

If the machines provide no opportunity for gain, and no element of chance, and return only the user's money worth in merchandise, they are within the law, Miller said.

EDISON HONORED AT NATIONAL MEETING OF ELECTRIC BODY

Speaks To Delegates
Through Means Of
Talkies

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 6.—The National Electric Light Association today paid formal tribute to Thomas A. Edison, inventor of the incandescent light and originator of the method of distribution of electric current in use throughout the world.

Edison was not present in person but his friend, Henry Ford, promised to appear before the convention before adjournment. Edison himself spoke to the meeting, however, through the medium of the talking movies.

"When I invented the incandescent lamp," he said, "I realized that the lamp alone was not enough. It was necessary also to perfect a system of electric generation and distribution. I immediately set about to develop it and it makes me happy to know that the system as well as the lamp still persists in all its essentials."

"I had in those days a high opinion of my invention. All inventors have. But I must confess that I never dreamed that from it would come the stupendous electrical industry of today."

A number of the "Edison pioneers," men who worked with Edison in the early days of the electrical industry, many of whom are still active, occupied places of honor at the meeting.

REVAMPING OF OHIO SPEED LAWS MAY BE RESULT OF VERDICT

Speeder Beats Case;
Statute Conflicts
With Ohio Law

COLUMBUS, O., June 6.—Revamping of all Ohio city and village speed laws was in prospect today as a result of a ruling handed down by the state supreme court.

Overruling the conviction in Lakewood municipal court of Jules Eshner, Lakewood, on a charge of speeding more than twenty-five miles an hour through the residential district, the court held the Lakewood ordinance in conflict with state laws, and therefore unenforceable.

Eshner, solicitor for Garfield Heights and Mayfield Heights villages, fought the conviction on the ground that the Lakewood ordinance declared speed in excess of twenty-five miles an hour an "absolute violation" of the law.

The court supported his argument, holding that speed alone is not a law violation, but only "contributory evidence" that might be used in prosecuting a charge of reckless driving.

"Width, traffic and the general use and usual rules of such road or highway" must be considered in fixing speed laws, the court held.

Its ruling was interpreted to mean that corporations in the state could not set up speed limits lower than that set by the state. That would mean the elimination of speed traps in villages, many of which have fixed eight and twelve miles an hour as speed limits.

It also is taken to mean that cities will have to change their speed laws to conform with the Bodley law, effective July 21, which permits a speed of twenty-five miles an hour in congested districts, thirty-five in residential sections and forty-five on open highway.

BATTLES ROBBER; MAY LOSE EYESIGHT

Believe Radio Man
Swam Ashore; Lock
Broken

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—William L. Tallman, charged with the "clothes closet" murder of Mrs. Virginia Patty in Los Angeles, was missing from the liner Admiral Benson when it docked here shortly after midnight, Capt. M. A. Sohst told the United Press.

Tallman, a handsome radio operator, had been arrested on board the ship after the body of Mrs. Patty, bundled up and dangling from a hook, was found in her Los Angeles apartment.

Tallman apparently jumped overboard to avoid questioning concerning the slaying of the pretty wife of Frank D. Patty, Portland, Ore., financier, Captain Sohst said.

The radio operator was last seen about 9 o'clock last night when he was held captive.

At that time the Admiral Benson was about 200 yards off shore in Half Moon Bay.

The climax to the sensational Los Angeles murder mystery came when the Admiral Benson docked. Los Angeles and local police immediately boarded the ship and learned that the lock on Tallman's stateroom had been broken and their quarry gone.

All passengers were detained half an hour while a thorough search of the ship was made. Police were of the opinion that Tallman might still be aboard the ship as he was a radio operator on it six months and it was here he met Mrs. Patty.

Police learned from members of the crew that Tallman was an excellent swimmer and the chances of his making the shore were good. Ole Johnson, member of the crew outside Tallman's cabin door, was mystified as to how Tallman got past him.

Captain Sohst said that when the radio warrant was received to hold Tallman, he called the operator before him and asked him to promise not to try to get away.

The captain said Tallman replied: "I have no reason to run away," and gave his word he would remain in the cabin.

Another theory that was being investigated was that Tallman hid aboard the ship until it entered the Golden Gate and then jumped off in San Francisco Bay where the conditions would have aided him in making shore.

Among the crowd gathered at the dock when the Admiral Benson arrived was Harry Tallman, the hunted man's father, who was at a loss to explain why his son dodged questioning in connection with the murder.

Tallman had boarded the Admiral Benson in Los Angeles before the murder of Mrs. Patty was discovered. After her body was found, Tallman was interviewed aboard the ship and at that time said no police officers had been to see him and that he knew nothing of the murder.

Captain Sohst pointed out that he did not keep Tallman locked up until the ship neared San Francisco on account of the fact he had no orders from federal authorities to arrest Tallman. If Tallman he (the captain) would have been innocent, Captain Sohst said, liable to the extreme penalty if he had put Tallman in irons.

ADMITS ROBBERY AFTER TWO YEARS

TOLEDO, O., June 6.—John Ruchlouschowski, 29, was taken to Sandusky today for questioning in connection with the robbery of a Sandusky woman more than two years ago.

He was unable to give the name of the woman but said he was one of four men who bound and gagged her and stole jewelry valued at $2400.

Ruchlouschowski said that he has been unable to sleep since the robbery and wanted to sign a confession to ease his conscience.

An arrangement already has been reached for a vote at 1 p. m. tomorrow on the Norris resolution to abolish short sessions of congress.

The house is continuing its efforts to straighten out the census amendments muddle.

ALLEGED SLAYER IS CONVICTED; TO DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Slayer Of Mother-in-Law Pleads Own Defense

PORTSMOUTH, O., June 6.—Joseph B. Locke, 50, who pleaded his own case before the jury with the declaration that "anybody in love is insane," must die in the electric chair for the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Galloway, 37.

A jury found Locke guilty after deliberating for four hours and a half. Mercy was not recommended, thus making the sentence of death mandatory. Sentence will be pronounced by Judge Russell K. McCurdy.

The chief witness against Locke was his wife, Lucy, from whom he separated just before Mrs. Galloway was slain. The couple had lived with Mrs. Galloway before their estrangement and Locke blamed the woman for their troubles.

Locke's only ray of hope is a motion for a new trial which his attorney, George W. Sheppard, said would be filed. Sentence will be withheld pending the motion.

Mrs. Galloway was killed last February at her home in City View, near here. Locke had gone away, after quarrelling with his seventeen-year-old wife, but returned "impelled by his love for Lucy," he said.

Locke said he remembered nothing after shooting her. His wife testified he shot her mother, then turned the gun on her. She is Locke's seventh wife, and she, too, had been married before.

Testimony brought out at the trial tended to show that Locke persuaded his wife to divorce her former husband, Marshall Hammond, so she could marry him. He found justification for this, he told the jury, in Biblical stories.

MAYOR IS PLAYING SLOT MACHINES

CHAGRIN FALLS, O., June 6.—Business was in prospect for slot machine operators today as Mayor Frank W. Stanton set out to patronize all of them.

Whether the business will be profitable depends on the returns received by the mayor, and his decision as to whether they are gambling devices.

The operators stand to win everything or nothing. If the mayor gets more than his money's worth, he will conclude the machines are gambling devices, and order them seized.

Mayor Stanton is acting on the advice of County Prosecutor Ray T. Miller, who told him the best way to determine whether the machines were gambling devices was to play them.

If the machines provide no opportunity for gain, and no element of chance, and return only the user's moneys worth in merchandise, they are within the law, Miller said.

CHOOSES NOT TO

DOVER, O., June 6.—Former Mayor J. Groh, who was elected April 2 by Gov. Myers Y. Cooper for not enforcing the laws and who was acquitted May 21, by a jury of accepting a bribe, will not be a candidate for mayor, he announced today. "I would not have the job at $500 a month under present conditions," Groh commented.

LIMA, O., June 6.—It seems quite probable that Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh will pop up here in Lima before the week is out.

EDISON HONORED AT NATIONAL MEETING OF ELECTRIC BODY

Speaks To Delegates
Through Means Of
Talkies

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 6.—The National Electric Light Association today paid formal tribute to Thomas A. Edison, inventor of the incandescent light and originator of the method of distribution of electric current in use throughout the world.

Edison was not present in person but his friend, Henry Ford, promised to appear before the convention before adjournment. Edison himself spoke to the meeting, however, through the medium of the talking movies.

"When I invented the incandescent lamp," he said, "I realized that the lamp alone was not enough. It was necessary also to perfect a system of electric generation and distribution. I immediately set about to develop it and it makes me happy to know that the system as well as the lamp still persists in all its essentials."

"I had in those days a high opinion of my invention. All inventors have. But I must confess that I never dreamed that from it would come the stupendous electrical industry of today."

A number of the "Edison pioneers," men who worked with Edison in the early days of the electrical industry, many of whom are still active, occupied places of honor at the meeting.

BATTLES ROBBER;
MAY LOSE EYESIGHT

CLEVELAND, June 6.—Fighting with a robber, even though the robber was armed with nothing but a toy pistol, may cost Wilfred Thorman, 25, the sight of his left eye.

Thorman, gas station attendant, was held up by a robber early this morning. He noticed the pistol the man held was a toy and in a tussle which followed the robber broke an oil bottle across Thorman's face, knocking him unconscious.

REVAMPING OF OHIO SPEED LAWS MAY BE RESULT OF VERDICT

Speeder Beats Case;
Statute Conflicts
With Ohio Law

COLUMBUS, O., June 6.—Revamping of all Ohio city and village speed laws may be the result of a ruling handed down by the state supreme court.

Overruling the conviction in Lakewood municipal court of Jules Eshner, Lakewood, on a charge of speeding more than twenty-five miles an hour through the residential district, the court held the Lakewood ordinance in conflict with state laws, and therefore unenforceable.

Eshner, solicitor for Garfield Heights and Mayfield Heights villages, fought the conviction on the ground that the Lakewood ordinance declared speed in excess of twenty-five miles an hour an "absolute violation" of the law.

The court supported his argument, holding that speed alone is not a law violation, but only "contributory evidence" that might be used in prosecuting a charge of reckless driving.

"Width, traffic and the general use and usual rules of such road or highway" must be considered in fixing speed laws, the court held.

Its ruling was interpreted to mean that corporations in the state could not set up speed limits lower than that set by the state. That would mean the elimination of speed traps in villages, many of which have fixed eight and twelve miles an hour as speed limits.

It also is taken to mean that cities will have to change their speed laws to conform with the Bodar law, effective July 21, which permits a speed of twenty-five miles an hour in congested districts, thirty-five in residential sections and forty-five on open highways.

ADMITTS ROBBERY AFTER TWO YEARS

TOLEDO, O., June 6.—John Roshplouchowski, 29, was taken to Sandusky today for questioning in connection with the robbery of a Sandusky woman more than two years ago.

Conscience-stricken and anxious to "get right with the world," the man walked into the police station here last night and told of the robbery.

He was unable to give the name of the woman but said he was one of four men who bound and gagged her and stole jewelry valued at $2400.

Roshplouchowski said that he has been unable to sleep since the robbery and wanted to sign a confession to ease his conscience.

DISAPPEARS WHILE SHIP MAKING PORT; LOCK FOUND BROKEN

Believe Radio Man
Swam Ashore; Lock
Broken

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—William L. Tallman, charged with the "clothes closet" murder of Mrs. Virginia Patty in Los Angeles, was missing from the liner Admiral Benson when it docked here shortly after midnight, Capt. M. A. Sohst told the United Press.

Tallman, a handsome radio operator, had been arrested on board the ship after the body of Mrs. Patty, bundled up and dangling from a hook, was found in her Los Angeles apartment.

Tallman apparently jumped overboard to avoid questioning concerning the slaying of the pretty wife of Frank D. Patty, Portland, Ore., financier, Captain Sohst said.

The radio operator was last seen about 9 o'clock last night when he was held captive.

At that time the Admiral Benson was about 200 yards off shore in Half Moon Bay.

The climax to the sensational Los Angeles murder mystery came when the Admiral Benson docked. Los Angeles and local police immediately boarded the ship and learned that the lock on Tallman's stateroom had been broken and all his quarters gone.

All passengers were detained half an hour while a thorough search of the ship was made. Police were of the opinion that Tallman might still be aboard the ship as he was a radio operator on it six months and it was here he met Mrs. Patty.

Police learned from members of the crew that Tallman was an excellent swimmer and the chances of his making the shore were good.

Ole Johnson, member of the crew outside Tallman's cabin door, was mystified as to how Tallman got past him.

Captain Sohst said that when the radio warrant was received to hold Tallman, he called the operator before him and asked him to promise not to try to get away.

The captain said Tallman replied: "I have no reason to run away," and gave his word he would remain in the cabin.

Another theory that was being investigated was that Tallman hid aboard the ship until it entered the Golden Gate and then jumped off in San Francisco Bay where tide conditions would have aided him in making shore.

Among the crowd gathered at the dock when the Admiral Benson arrived was Harry Tallman, the hunted man's father, who was at a loss to explain why his son dodged questioning in connection with the murder.

Tallman had boarded the Admiral Benson in Los Angeles before the murder of Mrs. Patty was discovered. After her body was found Tallman was interviewed aboard the ship and at that time said no police officers had been to see him and that he knew nothing of the murder.

Captain Sohst pointed out that he did not keep Tallman locked up until the murder of Mrs. Patty was discovered. San Francisco on account of the fact he had no orders from federal authorities to arrest Tallman, if Tallman he (the captain) would have been innocent. Captain Sohst said, liable to the extreme penalty if he had put Tallman in irons.

SWEDISH PEAS MAY PROVE INVALUABLE FOR SOIL BUILDING

GREENVILLE, Mich., June 6.—From three peas "smuggled" into the United States quite accidentally six years ago, an industry which seems destined to contribute millions of dollars in value to American farmers has been developed by Dr. William Hansen, local veterinarian.

The peas were found in two quarts of Swedish vetch seed which Dr. Hansen purchased for use on his farm in Kent county. He was attracted by their appearance and planted them by themselves to observe their growth and characteristics.

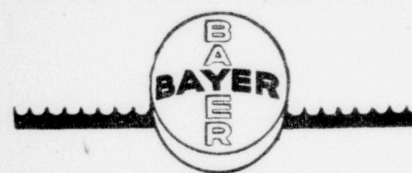

Hansen's Swedish peas, as they have become known, promise to be one of the nation's leading soil builders. They make a larger foliage growth than any other variety of field peas. A vigorous root system, knotted with nitrogen-bearing nodules extends deep into the soil. Vines extend six to twelve feet in length often, with a prolific growth.

The original three peas have been increased to nine bushels. Indications are that they will yield about thirty bushels of seed to the acre, according to W. C. Cribbs, Michigan State college regional extension worker. The college has been given a quantity of the peas to test this season.

MANY ATTEND W. C. T. U. SPRING INSTITUTE

One of the largest and most interesting W. C. T. U. meetings of the year was that of the Spring Institute held at the Yellow Springs Methodist Episcopal Church Tuesday.

The meeting was in charge of Mrs. Carrie McCall who opened the day with the reading of devotions. The program was then devoted to talks and music.

Mrs. J. O. Stewart, Cedarville, gave a splendid talk on "What is Citizenship?" This was followed by several discussions, one by Mrs. Charles Tindall, Xenia, who talked on "Beginning Right."

When your Children Cry for It

Mothers, who take one simple precaution, are seldom worried. With a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria in the house they can do what their doctor would tell them to do, when baby is fretful, feverish, colicky, constipated or stuffed up with cold—give a few drops of this pure vegetable, pleasant-tasting preparation. It comforts baby and soothes him to sleep in a jiffy. It's perfectly safe for the youngest infant. Use it freely—and as often as needed, specialists advise.

A more liberal dose is all it takes to comfort and relieve older children, when feverishness, bad breath, no appetite, colds, etc., show they need a good purgative. The mark of genuine Castoria is the Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Look for it to avoid imitations.

HOOVER URGES PROHIBITION BUREAUS BE RE-ORGANIZED

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Reorganization of federal bureaus concerned with prohibition enforcement was recommended by President Hoover in a special message to congress today.

The president recommended that a joint committee of congress be appointed at once to study this problem and make a report for consideration at the regular session beginning next December.

The president's message was as follows: "To the congress of the United States: "In order to secure the utmost expedition in the re-organization and concentration of responsibility in administration of the federal bureaus connected with prohibition enforcement, so greatly needed to improve their effectiveness, I recommend that the congress appoint a joint select committee to make an immediate study of these matters and to formulate recommendations for consideration at the next regular session."

"I shall be glad to appoint a committee from the departments to cooperate with such a committee of the congress. The national commission on law observance and enforcement will also cooperate through their studies of the departmental organization."

"The subject involves the transfer of parts of various bureaus and agencies from certain departments to others and it includes as well the necessity for the unification and strengthening of our border patrols, both in connection with prohibition and illegal entry of aliens. As the question embraces numerous laws and regulations in several bureaus, it will require extensive consideration which if given jointly by such committee of the congress and the departments prior to the regular session, will save many months of delay."

The president's message to congress was despatched while the new law enforcement commission was holding its first real working session.

About the same time Senator Hawes, Democrat, Missouri, announced he would introduce a resolution in the senate calling upon the commission to hold its meetings openly.

Although the president made no specific suggestion as to how the reorganization should be accomplished, it was generally understood in official circles that his message constitutes the first step in the administration program for transferring all enforcement activities from the treasury to the department of justice.

At the same time, President Hoover indicated he would appoint a joint committee from the various executive departments interested to co-operate with the congressional committee and the newly created law enforcement commission in preparing legislation for the next session of congress, which assembles in December.

Transmission of this recommendation to congress is soon after the resignation of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt as assistant attorney general gave credence to reports long current in official circles that the president intended to reorganize the department.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

DIVINE HEALING—But unto you that fear my name the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall.—Malachi 4:2.

AMERICA'S MOST IMPORTANT CITY?

The director of the New York Welfare Council, issuing some sort of statement about the work of his organization, speaks of New York as "the biggest" richest and most important city in the world.

Very likely it is the biggest, although a Londoner might be disposed to start an argument about it. Surely it is the richest; never in all history has there been such a concentration of wealth in one place. But most important? That's something else again.

We have always worshipped bigness in this country. It is instinctive for us to feel that the largest thing must be the best. And it is easy to be dazzled by New York. Stay there for a while and you get the feeling that nothing that happens anywhere else really matters. You speak of other places as "the provinces," and feel sorry for the luckless mortals who cannot experience the subway jams, cramped living quarters and eternal confusion of the metropolis.

Yes, New York is very big and dazzling. But most important? It is foolish to call it that. There isn't any "most important" city—or, if there is, its identity is different for each man or earth.

Your own most important city may be the town you live in. It may be the place where you were raised, made important to you now by the haze of old memories that has settled about its forgotten outlines. Or it may be some distant town where something important once happened to you; a town in which you got one of those momentary, elusive experiences that life sometimes offers, in which the heavens were parted and you could see, for a space, your own divinity.

Things like that happen unexpectedly. They are not explainable. They come without being asked, and they cannot be made to come back on demand. Yet all of us, at one time or another, experience them.

A man goes on his daily round, as he has gone on it for years, unsuspecting. Then, one day, there comes a moment in which things are transfigured, and the world wears a new aspect. His familiar home street, perhaps, appears to him in a new light. It is no longer an ordinary roadway flanked by ordinary houses and apartments; it is an enchanted lane, about which are grouped the temporary stopping places of tired and groping men and women who are making the universal pilgrimage from imperfection to perfection, from ugliness to beauty, from selfishness and cowardice to heroic self-sacrifice.

After that the old routine returns. But it is never quite the same again. The man knows, now, that the world is not what he had supposed it, but far better.

The place where that sort of thing comes to you is, to you, earth's most important spot. Statistics of size and wealth do not count. Every town can be a window through which unseen things can be glimpsed. And life can hold no more important experience.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

COST OF LIVING

Recent figures must convince us, despite the size of the monthly bills, that the cost of living has gone down. We buy more luxuries than ever before, but the cost of food and the actual necessities does not hit the average family so hard as it did in the disastrously high price period shortly after the war. And the increase in wages has more than kept pace with the cost of living. It is true that for what cost one dollar in 1914 we now pay $1.64, but it is also true that for every dollar in wages received in 1914 the wage earner now gets $2.31. Frequently we hark back to the old days when a square meal at a fair restaurant was twenty-five cents. And yet, unknown to many, there are restaurants today furnishing a meal for thirty-five cents. If we are "broke" today, it is largely because we overbuy on luxuries.

LUXURIES

Speaking of luxuries, it is a bit hard to discover just where the necessity leaves off and the luxury begins. Automobiles not long ago were ranked as luxuries. With new conditions of living, the increased size of cities, new business and new competition, automobiles for thousands are necessities. Even the possession of two cars may rank as a necessity.

SATURATION

Producers do not need to fear saturation of the market when they learn that only 30 per cent of American homes have radios, only 50 per cent of homes have washing machines, only five per cent of homes have electric refrigeration. And as for motor car saturation, no danger of that so long as man's imagination is such that he wants a new car every time a new model comes out, whether he needs it or not.

A BAD MARK

Unquestionably a bad mark is set against us by the great poet of India, Tagore. He cancelled his tour in the United States. Later, in Japan, he says the reason he left the United States was because of the atmosphere of suspicion and incivility which was evident to him as soon as he crossed the border from Canada. This news item may not attract a great deal of attention but it is important. The United States is not yet a grown-up nation. It is not internationally-minded enough to recognize worth in whatever garb of color or creed.

NEW IDEAS

Somebody says there are no new ideas. He wasn't well acquainted with modern publicity and advertising men. A New York motion picture house wasn't doing well. An advertising man was called in. He hired 30 old couples to sit in nearby restaurants and appear to be deaf. The old gentlemen carried ear trumpets. This is the way it worked. The old lady shouted into the ear trumpet, so that everybody could hear, "That's a wonderful picture at the theatre around the corner; let's go there." He misunderstood, and his wife repeated her phrase louder. Then he said "O-o-o-o, yes! I've heard that's a wonderful picture. Let's go!" The house was filled after that during its entire run.

STEEL INDUSTRY SAID TO BE ENJOYING GREAT PROSPERITY

By CHARLES M. SCHWAB
Chairman of the Board, Bethlehem Steel Corporation
(Charles M. Schwab was born at Williamsburg, Pa., Feb. 18, 1862. He was educated at St. Francis college and holds numerous honorary degrees from various universities. As a boy he drove a stage from Loretto to Cresson, Pa., later entering the service of the Carnegie company as a stake driver. In 1887 he was made superintendent of the Homestead Steel Works. From 1897 to 1901 he was president of the Carnegie Steel Co., Ltd., and president of the U. S. Steel corporation from 1901 to 1903. He is now chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, the Bethlehem Steel company and the Chicago Pneumatic Tool company. He is also director of more than a dozen other concerns, and was director general of shipbuilding of the Emergency Fleet corporation from April to December, 1918. His home is in New York City.)

The steel industry is enjoying its greatest peace time prosperity and is expecting its greatest demand in its history, but it has its problems, worries and dangers to be on guard about. The steel industry recently met under conditions distinctly favorable to the continuance of general prosperity. Between this and the previous meeting, Herbert Hoover became president of the United States, Mr. Hoover has taken office at a moment of undiminished prosperity in our country that is unparalleled. The outstanding fact in our own business is that the steel industry is enjoying its greatest

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Before you can completely understand the care of the skin you must know something about its structure. Physically, skin is tissue in three main layers. The top layer is the epidermis, a pliable, elastic covering stretched over your body. It is translucent, which means that it lets color show through, and the rosiness that your complexion has comes from the tissue beneath with the blood running through it.

There are color cells in the lower part of the epidermis which we call pigment. When you freckle or tan the presence of these color cells is more apparent. The fineness of your skin is determined by the size of the pores in it. These are the open mouths of the sweat and fat glands. When they are distended the condition is ugly, and often leads to their becoming clogged with dust and blackheads.

The largest pores one has are those of the face. Usually the pores of the face remain fine and close all through life. But the exposed pores of the face have a tendency to lose their elasticity as time goes on. They become lax, stay open, grow clogged and give the skin a muddy look, or if they do not become clogged, at least the skin is coarser looking.

Under the epidermis is the second layer of skin, called the true skin, tissue in which there are nerves and blood vessels, muscles, hair, oil and sweat glands. From this layer the epidermis gets its blood nourishment. The third layer is much like the second but of looser texture, with fat cells enmeshed in it. It is in this layer that the fat accumulates in stout people. And it is this layer that thin people must keep resilient so that their faces will not look thin and starved.

The nutrition of the blood, and the blood supply of the skin is directly under the control of a nervous mechanism which can either dilate or contract the blood vessels and so increase or diminish the amount.

The arteries feed the nerves, the nerves control the muscles, the muscles control the blood supply and the blood supply nourishes the skin.

Does that all sound very complicated? I have tried to make it simple. But at any rate this much is clear. Beautiful complexions must originate beneath the skin. The blood is the first source of all complexion beauty, as is clearly indicated by the functions of the nerves, muscles and blood circulation.

One of the most important effects that beauty preparations can have upon the skin is a stimulating effect. The creams and liquids that stimulate the skin bring up the blood to nourish the tissue naturally. People with poor circulation need this artificial stimulation to help nature carry on its work. The stimulants gently induce an increased flow of blood to the facial arteries, which naturally nourishes and invigorates the nerves, glands and muscles of the skin—in other words, the tissue that is the skin itself.

The initial cannon shot in answer to the O'Fallon ruling was fired by Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa—in the form of his bill for a two-billion dollar national road building program, to enable auto trucks to compete with the railways.

However, there is another thing to be taken into consideration," suggests Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington. "The O'Fallon decision is sure to be seized on as a precedent by other great public utilities, besides the railroads."

"The power industry, for example! The law provides that their investments of today shall furnish the basis for the future determination of the value of power companies' properties. But unfortunately the federal power commission lacks funds to ascertain the amounts of these present day investments. The O'Fallon case is a reminder to remedy this deficiency immediately."

"It is a decision which involves many ramifications."

"As for transportation charges," adds the Washington senator, "the simplest method of preventing excess will be to reduce the percentage of profits allowed to the railroads, as their valuations are increased—if the interstate commerce commission increases them. We do not know yet what its policy will be under the new ruling."

Senator Brookhart is not inclined to wait long to find out, either. "The O'Fallon decision! Twenty per cent money in Wall street—plainly insufficient currency available! Increasing unemployment! His road bill is his solution of the problem—defiance of the railroad threat—two billions thrown into circulation—for everybody!"

was a railroad attorney.

The decision's purport was that the interstate commerce commission was wrong in rejecting the railroads' contention in toto—the commission ought to have made a certain amount of allowance for the present day cost of rebuilding them. How much of an allowance it ought to have made remains unsettled. That will take more litigation.

But the first impression to get out in Washington was that the supreme court had decided flat-footed for the railroads.

Unquestionably that was what the roads had been fighting for.

Nevertheless, as the figures' magnitude soaked into the minds of big business' friends in official life, they gave a kind of an involuntary gasp of horror—almost audibly.

Eleven billions!—or maybe 17 billions!—created out of nothing!—and handed over to the railroads, to capitalize at their customers' expense!

What would the public say?

An analysis of the court's opinion brought back some color to officialdom's cheeks, but its pulse continued to flutter.

Whatever way the situation is looked at, stiffer transportation charges are advanced them—and how choose will they be?—in this era of farm discontent, and hollering about high prices already.

As President Hoover expressed it, "I am confident that there will be no increase in railway rates as a result of the O'Fallon decision"—evidently meaning that he hopes the matter is exactly the same as any other citizen's—actual, doubtless that he will be more respectfully listened to.

True, on investigation it proved to be not quite so vast a helping as first glance had assessed it at—but even scaled down to its actual proportions, big business is afraid of it.

In itself the O'Fallon case was a peewee lawsuit. Indirectly it meant a nation's ransom.

Thus: American railroad rates are fixed on what the roads are estimated to be worth—in order to pay fair dividends on the money supposedly invested in them. Notoriously most of them were watered to such an extent, years ago, that they appeared to be worth a lot more than it really cost to build them—but they were getting away with it.

This did not satisfy them. The interstate commerce commission persisted in reckoning their original construction costs—which were principally pre-war costs. The roads wanted the commission to figure what it would cost to rebuild them today—at far higher prices of everything: labor and material.

The difference was no trifling. The commission's total valuation was 23 billions. The post-war basis is about 40 billions.

That is, the roads claimed a 17 billion margin in their own favor. However, some calculations were lower. They tapered down to 11 billions. Even that would furnish an excuse for boosting freight and passenger tariffs higher than Mt. Ararat—and for cutting wages.

The O'Fallon is a dinky little nine-mile line but it was picked to test the railroads' valuation argument.

In the United States supreme court the other day, Justices Taft, Van Devanter, Sanford, Sutherland and McReynolds announced how they had decided the case—Justice Holmes, Brandeis and Stone disagreeing with them—Justice Butler keeping quiet, because he formally

Diet and Health

Answers to Mothers:
God could not be everywhere;
therefore He made mothers.
—Jewish Proverb.

"Our little girl has been cured of thumb sucking by the use of the bandage on her arms, which you recommended in your column, Dr. Peters. We are certainly grateful to you."

"Can you help us on this? She walks with her toes in. She has been doing it since she was a baby and she is now five years old."

If the little girl is only a little pigeon-toed, the condition will eventually remedy itself as she gets older. But if she is very much so, you will have to see an orthopedic surgeon, because the earlier you have it attended to, the better, Mrs. L. Some splints or braces of some sort, coupled with massage and special exercises, will remedy it.

In today's mail there was a letter from a mother who wanted to know how to break her child of the dirt eating habit; another letter about nail biting, and still another about a baby who sucks her thumb.

You see from Mrs. L's letter above that the thumb sucking is cured by cardboard splints around the elbows, pinned on to the sleeve above and below the elbows. This prevents the child from getting her fingers to the mouth, but doesn't prevent the use of the hands or the free movements from the shoulder. These splints are also to be used in dirt eating and nail biting habits. For dirt eating, they need only be used when the child has access to dirt; but for the nail biting, all day, and for the thumb and finger sucking they have to be used at night, too. The splints have to be kept on for three or four days, or longer, until the little nerve path in the brain that has been carved out by the habit is obliterated.

We have a list of books on the general care and feeding of children which can be obtained by following column rules.

Mrs. V.—It is not the heat that causes the loss of vitamins so much in cooking, as it is the air. In the modern canning of vegetables, the air is excluded, so according to Eddy's research, modern canned goods are higher in vitamin C than the home cooked vegetables. The other vitamins are not so readily destroyed by cooking as is the vitamin C.

Your baby should have pureed vegetables. It is all right to give him the canned pureed vegetables, if you want to, but the five-year-old should have good, solid hunks of vegetables to chew on, and not too soft, either, for the development of his teeth and jaws. So as long as you have to cook vegetables for him and for the rest of the family, it should not take so much time to puree whatever you cook for the baby.

Of course, the baby and the boy should have spinach or kale or some other greens, for their iron, two or three times a week. If you find that it would lighten your work to have these prepared vegetables for the baby, there is no reason why you shouldn't have them; although, to be on the safe side, give him his orange juice every day (high in the anti-scurvy vitamin C) and some tomato juice (high in the anti-neuritic vitamin B, also the growth vitamin A, and vitamin C); also some cod liver oil for vitamins A and D.

Tomorrow: Protein Requirements.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot "cure" or give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column, in turn. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and 2 cents in coin for each article, to cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, 10 cents in coin, with fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, must be enclosed. Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

It is still essentially true that we get out of life pretty much what we put in. If we will not go out of our way to do favors for others, or even to remember them, we are quite apt to be lonely all your life. Your er, that we are friendless and the world is a very sad and dreary place.

And if we are friendly, interested in others and anxious to do for them, we are just as surely repaid by finding friendly people who go out of their way to be nice to us.

"Dear Virginia Lee: This is 'Synthetic Lad' again. I sometimes miss a paper and was afraid I'd miss your answer. I read it in last night's paper and was pleased. My folks have known another family for many years and they are very good friends. I've known their children for a long time. Because we live about 100 miles from them I've never become really good friends with any of them."

"A short time ago the eldest boy (24) got married and is living in a city near here. He has been over to see me and I was introduced to his wife. She is 19. I like them both very much. As he was reared on a farm he does not like his job, which is indoors, and he has asked me to get him some outdoor work here. As they are the kind of people that will benefit the town I'd like to have them move here, so I've been thinking of it. But it seems to me there is also a selfish reason, because they'd be nearer and I could see them more often."

"What I wish to ask you is: What can I do to make myself better company so that I'd be more like a close friend? I'd like to know them better than I do. I spend many of my evenings at home alone. I do not belong to any clubs or organizations, and as I am very shy I've no friends. I'm not a good mixer, and find it hard to keep from getting lonesome."

"I'll surely appreciate any suggestions you can make. I don't dance and I'm not much of a lady's man. Since I'm 20 it's about time I snap out of it, isn't it? Again thanking you, I am, SYMPATHETIC LAD."

Yes, it is time you "snapped out of it," if you don't want to be lonely all your life. Your letter was quite a coincidence. I wrote the "lead" to this column from an idea given me by something I read, then picked your letter up casually from a pile on my desk, and it just happened to fit in perfectly with the "lead."

You must be interested enough in others to forget yourself. That is the secret. At the friends of yours, for instance. The young man is interested in farming and about such things. Talk to him about such things. I am sure you can help him. If you are not posted, be genuinely interested.

The young wife will be absorbed in her new home and will be glad to have some one to talk to about her plans and experiments, so there is no reason why you cannot be a veritable god-send to the young couple if you succeed in getting him work in your town. The same rule holds good with all sorts of people. They are all interested in something and the better educated—and I don't necessarily mean college education—they are the more interesting is their hobby.

In my work I meet many people who have interesting jobs, so interesting, in fact, that while I am listening to them and asking them questions, I wonder how I ever came to miss getting a job so fascinating. Why not learn to dance? There are many lonely girls who need partners, and meeting people in a social way is the surest way of overcoming this tiresome shyness.

Peter's Adventures

BY FLORENCE VINCENT

BECAUSE CROW TOO OFTEN "DANGER" CRIED

However, as the memories of old times made White Heron feel in a moment he managed to pull himself together and continue his story.

"There is nothing very cheerful about this tale I am telling, but if you wish to hear it you shall. As I was saying, as soon as the nestlings are hatched, busy days set in for their mother and for me. You have no idea how fast the babies grow. Then, if ever, we parent Herons give our wings plenty of exercise."

At other times of the year we much prefer to use our legs and wade about in the water, but when there are so many little mouths to feed it would take us too long to walk, besides we could not get the food to the nest, and so we fly. Sailing back and forth all day long, our long legs dangling in the air, our beautiful plumes trailing behind us—long mantes of snow white fluff—wife and I take turns at bringing the little shavers tidbits from the swamps."

Suddenly White Heron stopped talking and looked about him in a frightened sort of way, peering first in one direction and then in another, as though he were more than half expected danger to creep upon him from some quarter.

"Don't stop now, White Heron, go on, do! What are you shaking like that for?" The boy noticed the bird's long legs were trembling once more.

"I don't know what is the matter with me," chattered Heron. "Nothing is wrong now—the coast is clear—but somehow every single time I get to this part of my story I am afraid, for what I am going to tell you is very, very dreadful."

"Wife and I were sobbly up that we did not notice an object coming down the stream. Suddenly, we heard a hoarse cry: 'Neighbor Heron, beware! A stranger is in the swamps!'"

"It was friend Black Crow calling to us, but he was always warning the swamp people of something or other—it seems as if a stalk of grass waving in the wind was enough to make him cry 'Danger!' so we did not pay much attention to his signal."

"That old sentinel's bright eye has caught sight of something he has not seen before, and he is making his usual howl-o-d about it," chuckled wife.

"What a pity Crow doesn't make sure of what things are before he tries to stir up an alarm! One of these fine days danger is going to come into the swamps and we shall not escape it because he has fooled us so often," I replied.

SAY FIFTY MILLION DOLLARS WERE BET ON BRITISH RACE

Huge Prices Paid When Long Shot Takes Classic

LONDON, June 6.—The name of Trigo, a stout-hearted Irish thoroughbred, was on every British tongue today.

Forgetting the failures of the favorites and its own financial losses, the British public was united in tribute to a great horse. The splendid race run by the little known Trigo in winning the Epsom Derby, first among horses of the world, captured the fancy of the people and had become a favorite topic among sportsmen throughout the world.

Despite the fact that an estimated $50,000,000 changed hands as a result of Trigo's surprising triumph yesterday, the greatest interest in the classic race was as a sporting event in which a great horse won a great battle against discouraging odds.

A west end London business man found himself $600,000 richer as a result of drawing the Trigo ticket in the great stock exchange sweepstakes.

A Leeds haberdasher, J. L. Brill and a major stationed at a faroff army post at Rajputana, India, held Trigo in the Calcutta sweepstakes and were $300,000 richer today.

A clerk in a London cable office, J. Mackie, had $100,000 as a result of having drawn Brienz, third place winner in the stock exchange stakes and others in all parts of the civilized world shared in the monetary gains of the three leading horses, Trigo, Walter Gay and Brienz.

Even William Barnett, Dublin corn broker who owns the great Trigo, shared in the work of other horses than his own. It was reported here, he is said to have won $25,000, aside from his winnings on Trigo, by purchasing a quarter interest in the Brienz ticket held by Mackie.

It was the greatest betting derby in the 149 years since the great turf classic was inaugurated at Epsom Downs.

Those who bet heavily on Cragador, the favorite with a majority of betters, lost heavily. One syndicate paid a 7-year-old lad, Jimmy Gibbs, $60,000 for a three-quarters interest in the Cragador stock exchange ticket he held and which proved worthless to all but but Jimmy.

Royalty was represented by the Prince of Wales, Princess Mary, the Sultan of Zanzibar and others.

INJURED WHEN CAR AND AUTOS COLLIDE

L. O. Reed is still confined to his home in Yellow Springs with a dislocated hip and other injuries suffered in an accident involving two autos and a traction car on Xenia Ave. in that village a week ago.

The mishap occurred when an auto owned by Fred Loe, Yellow Springs, dry cleaner, traveling south, tried to pass another car and crashed into a Springfield-Xenia Railway Co. traction car. The machine rebounded and collided with an auto from which Reed was alighting, pinning him between the two autos. The name of the driver of Loe's car was not learned.

BARBER DIES ON JOB
ROCKVILLE, Conn., June 6.—Henry Warren, barber, was his usual cheerful, conversational self as he slipped hot towels on a customer's face preparatory to wielding the razor. Suddenly the chatter stopped. The customer, surprised, looked up. Warren had fallen dead of a heart attack.

"Results from the first bottle of Konjola were almost incredible. In two weeks my appetite and digestion was restored. Gas, bloating and belching spells disappeared. My breath came freely, and I am fast regaining weight and strength. I feel like a different woman. Konjola surely proved to me it is a wonderful medicine!"

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

COATES BARBERS DEFEAT POST OFFICE TEAM IN SOFTBALL LOOP

The unbeaten Coates Barber Shop softball team is still in that class.

The leaders of the American League registered their fourth straight victory at the expense of the Post Office nine, winning 8 to 2 in a well-played game Wednesday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Herman Wells, Coates pitcher, allowed only seven hits. The nine hits obtained by the winners off Dice and Downey, Post Office hurlers, were bunched in the five innings in which the league-leaders scored their runs.

Smith, Coates first-sacker, batting in clean-up position, rapped out three hits, including a home run. Cain and Dice each hit safely twice for the losers.

ACCUSED IN CELL WITH HIS ACCUSER

CLEVELAND, O., June 6.—Louis Wilcox, former state prohibition agent, was to enter the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., today to start serving an eighteen-month sentence for impersonating a federal officer.

Wilcox, after leaving the state dry corps, was charged with representing himself as a federal dry agent and soliciting "protection" money from Joseph Stayanchi, Stayanchi set a trap for Wilcox and caused his arrest.

Wilcox, late yesterday, surrendered to federal authorities, announced that he had dropped his appeal from the conviction, and was ready to go to the pen.

When he was taken to a cell in the federal building, he found that his cellmate was Stayanchi, the man who had caused his arrest. Stayanchi was being held on a liquor law charge that grew out of a raid yesterday.

GUILD DOES ITSELF PROUD; MYSTERY IS SMARTLY DONE HERE

Whether the Xenia Little Theater Guild was created for mystery plays or mystery plays for the Guild is a problem that we shan't attempt to solve. But there is no question that the two of them work incredibly well together and combine to provide entertainment of the like of which has seldom been equaled locally.

"In the Next Room," a three-act mystery, presented to members and the public as the fourth and last offering of the Guild this season, before a large audience at City Hall Theater Wednesday night, represents the supreme triumph (to date) of the organization.

The Guild stepped gracefully down, or up if you prefer, from the lighter drama to melodrama. It was, if you ask us, just about the best Guild production of its season.

When it comes to the cast one has to emit the whoop of enthusiasm the Guild has so often brought forth. The performers, despite difficult roles, are seldom ill at ease in conversational sequences and were fast to pick up their cues.

It is one of the smaller duties of life to give credit where credit is due and we must order laurel leaves all around.

There was considerable plot to be followed and a couple of apparent murders but the mystery all revolves around an antique cabinet delivered to the home of Philip Vantine supposedly by mistake. This piece of furniture is chuck full of secret drawers and one drawer contains some priceless stolen diamonds. The mechanism is so arranged, however, that the diamonds are guarded by poison that deals death to two persons who open it.

Miss Katherine Fittz, Yellow Springs, as "Lorna Webster," niece of Vantine, has the leading feminine part and from this show we gather the suspicion that she is stepping to the front rank of local amateur stars.

James Bryson as "James Godfrey," her fiancé, plays opposite her. He starts out in life under the peculiar handicap of dealing with the one thing that alleged critics really know, or should know, something about. He is a reporter. Nevertheless he strikes just the right note at all times and with the invaluable aid of his fiancée solves all the mysteries to be solved, leaving the detective force out in the cold, as it were.

Isadora M. Hyman as "Felix Armand," which is only one of his several aliases, never appeared to better advantage (and he has always succeeded in appearing to pretty good advantage). He turns out to be an international crook.

Among others who contributed a large share to the value of the entertainment were Marcus McCallister as "Parks," Vantine's butler, and Robert Owens as "Rogers," Vantine's footman. McCallister impersonated a well-meaning but thick-headed butler and provided what comedy the play contained.

Representing the New York detective service were Harry E. Kiernan as "Inspector Grady," and Arthur Hyman as "Simmonds," his assistant. It seemed that if all the affairs of the world could have been entrusted in the inspector's care there would be no more crime waves. Then came a crime wave. However, both gave commendable portrayals.

Others deserving more than passing comment were Harry A. Higgins as "Philip Vantine," Mrs. James Wilson III, who was every inch "Madame De Charriere," and Miss Bertha Hyman as "Julia," her maid, who also showed marked dramatic ability. Even Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, had a familiar role, that of "Tim Morel," a policeman.

The play was directed with commendable competence as per usual by Miss Esther Muriel Smith, Xenia dramatic art teacher.

No small part of an entertaining evening was supplied by the Xenia Woman's Music Club. Miss Juanita Rankin gave four piano selections that would have compensated for anything lacking in the way of other entertainment, if there had been such a lack, while Mrs. Lawrence Shields sang three vocal solos which were well received.

Mrs. Shields also made a brief talk in which she discussed the accomplishments of both the Guild and music club and indicated that the future of each organization may be looked at through rose-colored glasses.—P. W. Frame.

James D. Brown, 88, former resident of Greene County for many years, died at the home of his daughter Mrs. Cora Bence at Port William Thursday morning at 4 o'clock from infirmities of age. He had been bedfast for the last five weeks.

Mr. Brown was born in Virginia but since the age of 7 had lived in Greene County until about ten years ago. His wife preceded him in death in 1914.

Surviving are three children, Mrs. Cora Bence, with whom he lived; and Chester and Emmett, both of Columbus, former residents of Jamestown. Another daughter passed away last April 18 in Xenia.

Funeral services will be held at the Port William M. P. Church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in charge of the Rev. E. H. Woolworth, Westminster, O., with interment in Port William Cemetery.

TULIPS IN HOLLAND (MICH.)—HOLLAND, Mich., June 5.—It's tulip time in Holland. Visitors from surrounding cities are being attracted by the gorgeous display of flowers. There are more than a quarter of a million tulips in Holland.

Robert Elliot Burns

past caught up with him, stripped him of reputation and prosperity and dragged him down.

"The moving finger writes and having writ

Moves on, nor all your piety nor wit

Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,

Nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

Honorably discharged from the army in 1919, after winning a wound and a citation for bravery in action, Robert Elliot Burns found himself broke and hungry in an Atlanta, Ga., flophouse.

Urged on by starvation he and two companions robbed a grocery, obtaining $4. They were captured and sentenced to from six to ten years at hard labor.

A chain was riveted to Burns' leg and he was put to work on the state highways from sun-up to sun-down and chained to other convicts in the camps at night. In 1922, after serving three months time, he escaped with the aid of a friendly convict who swung a sledge hammer at his iron ankle while it was held against the end of a railroad tie.

That was the past that caught up with Robert Elliot Burns, the skeleton in his closet that rattled and brought down retribution on his head. Of course, it was a woman that opened the closet door, a woman scorned.

After his escape, Burns arrived in Chicago penniless. He got a job in the stockyards as a laborer for a week. Then, in a new second hand suit, he became a clerk. Today, seven years after the sledge blow was struck that set him free, he is the editor and publisher of the Greater Chicago magazine. He has lived straight ever since. The friendship of influential citizens is his—success.

But there was a woman scorned, Mrs. Emily Pacheco, a widow, thirteen years his senior. Burns roomed with her when he worked in the stockyards. She learned of his prison record from a letter he received from his father, who was trying to get a pardon for his son.

Mrs. Pacheco let the ex-soldier appreciate the importance of her knowledge. They were married in June, 1926. Burns charges he was coerced into the ceremony by fear of exposure.

Then the girl came to Chicago. She was studying violin and her name, she told Burns when they met at a dance, was Miss Lillian Salo. She was 22 or some sixteen years younger than Burns.

Mrs. Burns learned about Miss Salo's friendship with her husband. The Georgia authorities were notified that an escaped member of one of the state chain gangs was living in luxury in Chicago. Chicago police were notified. Burns was arrested.

"We fell in love," Miss Salo told police, in speaking of her association with Burns. "He told me he was married and was arranging for a divorce. I didn't know about the sentence."

"If he has to go back to the chain gang, I'll wait for him."

Burns' new friends, bankers, lawyers, manufacturers have banded together to do whatever they can for him. They say the ex-convict will have a host of character witnesses to aid in fighting extradition proceedings.

A woman scorned? Certainly she played her part in opening the door of the skeleton closet.

After the soft cushions of success and the respect of his friends and fellow men, the chain gang will be tenfold harder for Burns. Then there is the girl waiting. It is hard, terribly hard, but—"The moving finger writes.... nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

The friendship of influential citizens is his—and success.

But there was a woman scorned, Mrs. Emily Pacheco, a widow, thirteen years his senior. Burns roomed with her when he worked in the stockyards. She learned of his prison record from a letter he received from his father, who was trying to get a pardon for his son.

Mrs. Pacheco let the ex-convict appreciate the importance of her knowledge. They were married in June, 1926. Burns charges he was coerced into the ceremony by fear of exposure.

Then the girl came to Chicago. She was studying violin and her name, she told Burns when they met at a dance, was Miss Lillian Salo. She was 22 or some sixteen years younger than Burns.

Mrs. Burns learned about Miss Salo's friendship with her husband. The Georgia authorities were notified that an escaped member of one of the state chain gangs was living in luxury in Chicago. Chicago police were notified. Burns was arrested.

"We fell in love," Miss Salo told police, in speaking of her association with Burns. "He told me he was married and was arranging for a divorce. I didn't know about the sentence."

"If he has to go back to the chain gang, I'll wait for him." Burns' new friends, bankers, lawyers, manufacturers have banded together to do whatever they can for him. They say the ex-convict will have a host of character witnesses to aid in fighting extradition proceedings.

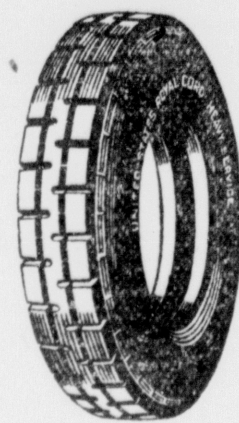

A woman scorned? Certainly she played her part in opening the door of the skeleton closet.

After the soft cushions of success and the respect of his friends and fellow men, the chain gang will be tenfold harder for Burns. Then there is the girl waiting. It is hard, terribly hard, but—"The moving finger writes.... nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

The World And All

WORDS BEAR FRUIT
On June 4, 1829, one hundred years ago, William Lloyd Garrison spoke at the Park St. Church, Boston. The speech made a great sensation. It was a rousing denunciation of one of America's old and honored institutions—human slavery.

That was the first of a series of speeches by this man Garrison. Finding that he was pretty generally considered a rebel and a radical because of his opposition to an institution in which so much money was invested, Garrison, who had plenty of fight in him, made another anti-slavery speech, and then another and another.

Within a short time he learned several things. One was that he had a good deal of power as a speaker, when he was speaking on an interesting controversial subject. Another was that his kind of talk was provocative of much wrath and violence. People fought about what he said.

It seemed foolish for any adult young man to suppose that he could, by talking, do anything about slavery. After all, whatever you might say about it, slavery was here, recognized by law, condoned by most religious folk, and extremely important as an economic factor in America's life and prosperity.

True, Boston wasn't a slave center. True, most of the financial interest in slavery was concentrated in the south, while Garrison was speaking in the north.

But the slaveholders of the south were mostly excellent folk.

Despite "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and other literature of a later date, these gentlemen of the Carolinas and Georgia and other aristocratic domains of the south were, as are their descendants of today, people of culture, refinement and good will. They held slaves and believed that slavery was at least a justifiable institution.

Garrison was a fiery talker. He probably did not admit much that I have here stated about the slaveholders. He started talking, and he found that his words had power. He wrote, edited a publication, and became a leader of the abolitionists.

It took nearly forty years, but those words bore fruit. Words, well chosen, well spoken and often repeated have a way of doing that.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies attracts water from the system into the lax, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

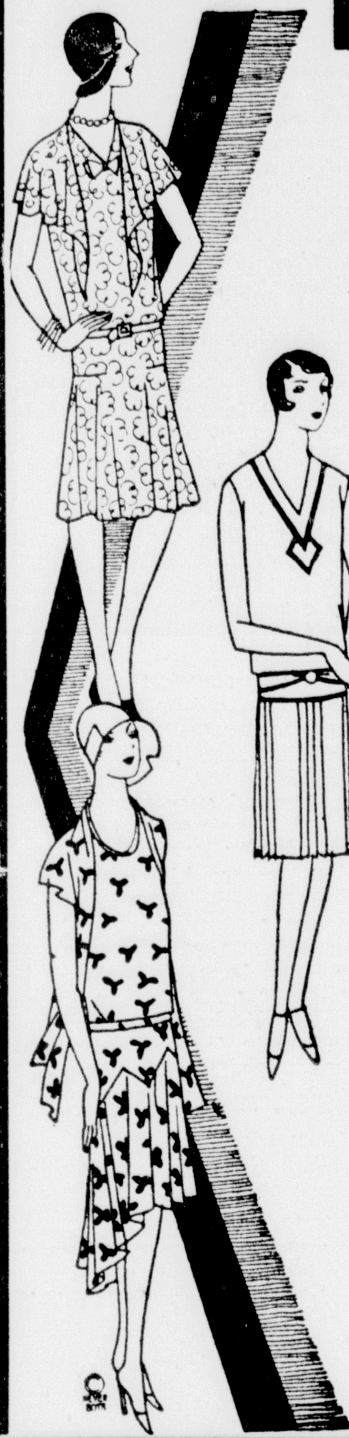

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderly at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. H. L. Sayre's Drug Store. —Adv.

Postmaster Frazer, prior to going into the shoe business for himself, was associated with the Putnam and Kingsbury shoe store for six years and then had charge of the shoe department of Jobe Bros. department store for one year.

He started his own store in a row vacant room in the Schmidt Bldg. on E. Main St. March 15, 1899 and re-located the store eight years ago at 11 E. Main St.

To Get Parole

A complete new outfit for Sunday. And another for not so special occasions. Tall, bright, sunflowers along the roads nodded happily. A catastrophe was narrowly averted when suddenly, right out of a little road running through a wheat field, hidden by the beautifully treacherous sunflowers, Kent Johns drove his beautiful sport roadster.

Kent ran his car into the ditch to avoid hitting the girls, and Pat stopped the Sullivan wreck on a dime. Vivian paled. It was the first time she had seen Kent since the evening he stopped at the gate. Her heart ached when she saw how pale and thin he seemed. He jumped out of his car.

"Say! That was a narrow shave. Ought to have honked. I might have killed both of you."

"Don't fool yourself!" Pat laughed. "This old percolator has a charmed life. I cut my first tooth on this left fender over here where the hole is."

"Hello, Kent," was all Vivian could say.

"Hi, Viv. I was going to call you this evening."

Vivian looked dumfounded, but he did not seem to notice.

"Want to talk to you about something. Got a date?"

On the eve of his parole from San Quentin (Cal.) prison, where he has served five years for the murder of Ray Raymond, Paul Kelly, above, former Los Angeles portrayer of juvenile delinquents, shines from publicity. Prison attaches say he has been poring over books on dramatic technique. He hopes to regain his old popularity.

THE FLAT TIRE

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

A DRAB LITTLE MOTH FLIES TO HAPPINESS
© 1929 CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC.

"Hello, Kent," was all Vivian could say.

READ THIS FIRST:
Vivian Matthews, 20, is looked upon as a "flat tire" in the younger set of Xenia, Kan. Found on the doorstep of Martha Matthews, an old maid, when a small baby, she knows nothing of her parents. She has made her shy and bitter. She feels no one even likes her because she is "nobody." Scion of the town's leading family, home after graduating from Kansas University, passes by the Matthews cottage and teases Vivian about being the same little "Sally Sad Eye Sit by the Fire." He prescribes marriage for her and tells her Aurelia "Dovie" Jansen and her mother are returning from Paris in two weeks and that they are to be married. Later the thud of the "Times Democrat" on the porch brings the startling headline: "Local Belle Weds Rich Count."

Patricia Sullivan, Vivian's best friend, known on Broadway as Cuddles Namara, returns to Bender after four years of trying to make a success on the stage. Cuddles bawls Vivian out severely for her inferiority complex, then sympathetically promises to help her improve her appearance and make friends.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III
Then she became serious. "But Vivian, anyone would know from your face that you are not common. You look like an aristocrat, really."

They talked for more than an hour—and when Vivian left Pat kissed her and told her they would plan together how she could change the course of her unhappy, uneventful life. Back in her room Vivian surveyed its drab surroundings and took stock of the things Pat had told her.

"She is right," she looked at the dull little room and shook her head. "What have I ever done to this room—or my life either, to make it any brighter? I must do something about it."

At last the sleep of exhaustion. And Miss Martha struggling painfully from her bed in high necked night gown with a candle in her hand, stealing in to tuck the covers around her.

It was the only time that ever permitted her to show any affection for the baby that had been given into her care twenty years before.

Had Vivian awakened and seen the cold old maid, her face soft and motherly in the candle light, standing there wondering at her tears it might have changed the entire course of her life.

Miss Martha stood so for a moment—then bent suddenly and kissed a truant tear that lingered on the soft pale cheek. Her shoulders seemed to bend still farther from their cruel burden of silence.

Destiny allowed to Vivian Matthews just one more month of the old quiet, uneventful life. And later there were times when Bender's "Flat Tire" began to wish Destiny had never caught up with her.

It was a hot, dusty, windy day in July, and Bender lay sweating under a merciless sun. Now and then a breeze would lift the curtains of the Matthews cottage. But it was as though an oven door had suddenly opened, sending out waves of heat. Kent's hot winds.

Pat and Vivian spent the afternoon driving "Cubby" Sullivan's practically defunct old flivver, christened the "coffee percolator," by Pat, on a shopping tour to Salina. In the back seat, representing a day's feverish search, lay Pat's hopes of making Vivian the village belle.

A complete new outfit for Sunday. And another for not so special occasions. Tall, bright, sunflowers along the roads nodded happily. A catastrophe was narrowly averted when suddenly, right out of a little road running through a wheat field, hidden by the beautifully treacherous sunflowers, Kent Johns drove his beautiful sport roadster.

Kent ran his car into the ditch to avoid hitting the girls, and Pat stopped the Sullivan wreck on a dime. Vivian paled. It was the first time she had seen Kent since the evening he stopped at the gate. Her heart ached when she saw how pale and thin he seemed. He jumped out of his car.

"Say! That was a narrow shave. Ought to have honked. I might have killed both of you."

"Don't fool yourself!" Pat laughed. "This old percolator has a charmed life. I cut my first tooth on this left fender over here where the hole is."

"Hello, Kent," was all Vivian could say.

"Hi, Viv. I was going to call you this evening."

Vivian looked dumfounded, but he did not seem to notice.

"Want to talk to you about something. Got a date?"

Pat nudged her and spoke up, her lips crimson. But not her cheeks. They were milky white against the red of her hair, and the green of her dress. Vivian folded her hands in a little gesture of pleased surprise and smiled.

"And I might have looked like that a long time ago—if I hadn't been such a fool."

"You mean if you'd had me to manage you," Pat gave another pat to her hair. "Listen. I do things up big when I advertise for a husband for you it is going to be written in the clouds by a flying airplane in a green airplane with red smoke. But I got to train you first. You look like big money to me!"

Vivian made a face at her, then stood fascinated, looking at herself in the mirror. Just then the door bell rang, and her heart seemed to stop. Her knees grew weak. She grabbed Pat's arm, and Pat shook her off.

"Well, I suppose you'll get panicky and gulp and be speechless and spoil all the good work I put in on you! Go right straight down those stairs and knock that big Johns up and tell him a good, or I wash my hands of you!"

Vivian begged her, in a panic. "You—go down and say I'll be right down."

"Nothing doing," Pat pulled at her impatiently, wanting to shake her. "I'll go with you. But I'm going to leave right with you."

The old housekeeper, old Kent Johns in, and was standing by the window, twirling his hat nervously. When Vivian and Pat stepped in the doorway. If there was a transformation in Vivian he did not seem to notice it.

"There was the customary 'Hi Viv'—and 'Hello Kent,' as Pat slipped out the door, grinning to herself, and left Vivian cold to entertain the Johns lord.

"Let's go for a walk," Viv. Kent seemed paler than ever. "I want to talk with you alone, where no one can hear or see us."

"Well," was all Vivian could say, as her knees shaking, she followed him out to the car and he helped her in.

Pat, sitting on the porch, tense with excitement and curiosity, waved and called loudly.

"Don't you young people stay out too late. There's a dangerous moon."

THE FLAT TIRE

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

READ THIS FIRST:

Vivian Matthews, 20, is looked upon as a "flat tire" in the younger set of Bender, Kan. Found on the doorstep of Martha Matthews, an old maid, when a small baby, she knows nothing of her parents. This has made her shy and bitter. She feels no one even likes her because she is a "nobody." Kentworth Hillman Johns III, scion of the town's leading family, home after graduating from Kansas University, passes by the Matthews cottage and teases Vivian about being the same little "Sally Sad Eye" by the "Fire." He prescribes marriage for her and tells her Aurelia "Dovie" Jansen and her mother are returning from Paris in two weeks and that they are to be married. Later the thud of the "Times Democrat" on the porch brings the startling headline: "Local Belle Weds Rich Centin."

Patricia Sullivan, Vivian's best friend, known on Broadway as Cuddles Namara, returns to Bender after four years of trying to make a success on the stage. Cuddles bawls Vivian out severely for her inferiority complex, then sympathetically promises to help her improve her appearance and make friends.

Pat nudged her and spoke up, laughing: "She was just saying right back here the evening looked as though guess I can let you see her. But any brighter? I must do something about it."

Vivian managed to make it known that the evening was not taken up.

"Bout eight, then," Kent waved to them and drove off.

Pat sat immovable a moment, watching Vivian staring after Kent's car. Then she broke into a hearty laugh.

"Good gravy, Viv! Don't tell me you lost your voice because Kent Johns asked you for a date. If it hadn't been for me you never would have been able to answer him."

"I don't see what he wants to see me for," Vivian still looked after the cloud of dust.

"Maybe," Pat laughed, "He is going to ask Miss Matthews for your hand in marriage."

Vivian stiffened. "Oh, don't be funny, Pat. It's probably some silly little thing."

Pat was suddenly practical. "Well, it's after six now. We better hurry. I want to have the pleasure of doling you up when you start out leading the Johns lamb to the slaughter. I smell orange blossoms."

Vivian scoffed and reddened with embarrassment.

Despite the fact that she was more puzzled than pleased with Kent's making a date with her, when Pat came over at seven o'clock to help dol her up, she found herself getting quite excited.

Pat brought a curling iron, and planting Viv in a chair gave her a hasty makeover, parting her hair straight in the middle and bringing it down softly over her ears.

"You can't look into I have finished with you," Pat told her, at she opened a box of make-up and powdered and rouged.

"Not too much of that junk, may be Kent don't like it!" protested Vivian.

But Pat just made fun of her. "Then he sure must have been blind when Dovie Jansen was around, if I remember her correctly."

The Sunday dress was taken from its folds of white paper and Pat held it up admiringly. Switching on a light, she held it to Vivian's face.

"That green is just the color of your eyes. And you know what it does to red hair—brings it out."

It was a straight line satin with wide flaring sleeves, and it fell just to her knees. Vivian had protested that it

Vaudeville audiences and radio listeners may never again hear the singing voice of Jack Grady, better known to many as a partner with Gene Carroll in that entertaining team of "Jack and Gene."

PROPER DISPLAY OF FLAG BEING URGED BY LEGION MEMBERS

Proper display of the flag on Flag Day, June 14, is being urged by Foody Post, American Legion, because of frequent disregard of the proper code, it is said.

Some merchants who displayed flags Memorial Day, left the flags out after sundown. Legion members say, and other improper uses of the colors were noted by the organization.

Legion members are also pointing out that flags in use by merchants have become soiled and that they should be cleaned before they are displayed on Flag Day. The post hopes to arrange a special rate with dry cleaners to have all the flags cleaned.

In displaying the flag, the Legion points out that these facts should be remembered:

- 1.—The flag should be displayed only from sunrise to sunset;
- 2.—When displayed with another flag against a wall from crossed staffs, the United States flag should be on its own right;
- 3.—When displayed from a staff projecting horizontally or at an angle from a window sill or balcony, the union should go clear to the peak of the staff;
- 4.—When displayed other than by being flown from a staff, it should be displayed flat, indoors or out. When displayed against a wall, the union should be uppermost and to the flag's own right, that is, to the observer's left. The same holds true when displayed in a window;
- 5.—When displayed over the middle of a street, the flag should be suspended vertically with the union to the north in an east and west street or the east in a north and south street;
- 6.—When displayed flat behind a speaker's platform, the flag should be above and behind the speaker;
- 7.—When flown at half-staff, the flag should be hoisted to the peak for an instant and then lowered to the half-staff position and should be raised again to the peak before being lowered for the night;
- 8.—When displayed over a casket, the union should be at the head and over the left shoulder. It should not be lowered into the grave nor allowed to touch the ground;
- 9.—When the flag is worn out and unfit for display, it should be totally destroyed, preferably by burning;
- 10.—Do not drape the flag over an auto. When festoons, rosettes or drapings are desired, buttons should be used;
- 11.—When a flag is lowered or hoisted or is passing in review in
